Learning Opportunity

Target audience: K-12 teachers and educational assistants are encouraged to attend.

This session helps educators move beyond the myth of a perfectly calm classroom and focus instead on building environments where students and staff can regulate and learn together. Grounded in evidence and drawing from your classroom experiences, we'll explore how to model, teach, and support regulation. You'll leave with practical, evidence-based tools you can use the next day!

Presenters

Rodney Snaterse

Rod is a Health Promotion Facilitator with the Healthy Schools team at Primary Care Alberta. Using the Comprehensive School Health framework, he partners with school authorities to help make schools healthier places for students and staff to learn, work, play, and grow. Rod has over 20 years' experience as a classroom teacher. He instructs preservice teachers and holds a Master of Education with a specialization in adult learning.
